

Learn from the Experts with GE Healthcare's CT Masters Series

Continuing advances in GE Healthcare CT imaging technology increase clinical capabilities and open the door for sites to offer new services. Advanced applications coupled with the exponential rise in processing power translate to new opportunities for clinicians. In today's competitive imaging market and reduced reimbursement environment, proper training is essential to realizing the full potential of any investment in CT technology.

To address this growing need, GE introduced a series of intensive and comprehensive courses in multi-slice CT and Advanced CT Applications, taught by experts in the latest technologies. These experts will help clinicians learn new CT techniques that can help them deliver better patient care while maximizing productivity.

At a network of GE CT training centers located throughout the United States, some of the world's top radiologists and cardiologists train physicians from around the globe on how to maximize the clinical benefits of the most advanced CT applications.
