TiP-TV® Training in Partnership: Online Programming continuing education

Issues in Radiology Management - Part II - Available January

This program, the second in the series, provides a compilation of selected educational content presented at the 36th annual meeting of the American Healthcare Radiology Administrators (AHRA) in Denver, Colorado. Interviews with primary presenters and AHRA members focus attention upon a host of diagnostic imaging issues that include: fiscal management, regulation, electronic imaging, picture archiving communications system (PACS) technology, and management operations. The course objectives specifically target radiology administrators. Other administrators and management personnel may also benefit from viewing this program.

Competition and Strategy in Healthcare - Available September

It is well known that continuous improvement of operational effectiveness is necessary to compete in the healthcare industry. However, is that enough to create value for your customers? This program emphasizes the role of distinct strategies that are coupled with process improvement initiatives in order to establish your organization's competitive advantage. "What is strategy?" and "How do I apply it to what I'm doing?" are just a few of the discussion points contained in this multifaceted program.

Unless otherwise noted, the online courses listed in this section will be ASRT-approved as Category A programs by the first online date. You must submit the required information by the deadline date to obtain continuing education credit.

Other technologists and medical personnel may also benefit.

The target audience is Radiology Administrators. All other healthcare leaders may also benefit from this presentation.
